SHORT SHAVINGS

CHIEF Wood, coal dealer, records the experience of a charming matron who had plumbers fixing the pipes in her home.

That wasn't all. She was baking. And what she was baking! Cherry pie!

What poet will sing a song that adequately will express the sweet delights of a delectable cherry pie made at the height of the cherry time in June!

Browned just right. Red inside. And juicy. Sits in the top. Juice swelling thru the stilt and thickening in ruby gobs, a dish to set out on a white cloth, to make the eater's mouth water and his eyes roll.

Well, that is what she was making—cherry pie. When the plumbers were gone she couldn't find the pie. At whom would suspicion point? Baisson's class in questionaire answering would find that an easy one. The answer is "The plumber."

The talented cooks' little boy was not bothered by probabilities or deductive reasoning, rules of evidence or anything of the sort. His method was simpler and direct. He looked in the oven and there was the pie. The result of the morning's distractions, what with plumbers plumbing was that the pie had been put in the oven and forgot.

L'Envoi: This tale has a happy ending. The pie wasn't burned to a cinder. The stove hadn't been lighted. A little delay and it came out hot and steaming, red inside, with the crust browned just right and the thick juice going out on the top.

Frank Callahan was telling about a baseball game which his favorite team in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates, had won. Each was made by the same man, Callahan said. "There was one thing wrong with his batting. He couldn't bunch his hits. So we got no runs at all."

J. F. Emans, attorney, heard someone ask for an aspirin tablet for a headache. This was in a party headed for Russell's Point.

Another member of the party eyed the treatment with interest. "Is that what an aspirin tablet is?" he said. "I always thought it was some fancy kind of writing tablet."

SAYS WONDERS OF RADIO ONLY BEGINNING

By NEA Service
NEW YORK. — Radio reception by merely plugging an electric light socket!

That's a new device which may revolutionize radio.

It is the invention of William Duhler, an East Side electrical wizard who helped win the war by developing a wireless submarine detector.

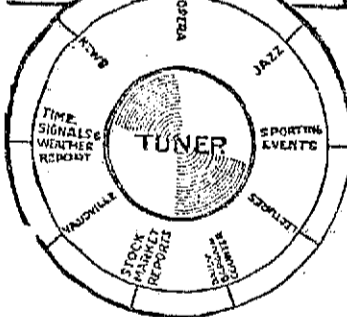

"It is not a 'wired wireless,'" he explains, "but a simple arrangement which makes it possible to utilize indoor wires as aerials."

He got the idea when he started building a large outdoor aerial. "It was hard work," he says. "I was about to give it up as a lost job when the idea struck me to use the wires in the house."

"I knew that any wire would receive the wireless waves. But I had to contend with the lightning current which went thru these wires."

"After some experimenting with condensers, I rigged up a little 'filter' which allowed the high frequency radio waves to pass thru without interference."

"Further work perfected the device so that now one need only screw this little 'Duhler' into an electric light socket, attach the receiving set and listen in!"

WILLIAM DUHLER AND HIS IDEA OF THE TUNING KNOB OF THE FUTURE. MERELY TURN THE HANDLE FOR ANYTHING YOU WANT TO HEAR.

regulation of the receiving set will become automatic. A turn of the tuning dial, and he will be listening to jazz. Another turn and he will hear opera.

It will be simple. Space will be absolutely annihilated.

Eskimos and Patagonians, Chinese and Mexicans, Finns and Americans will all become next-door neighbors.

Alternating Impulses Make Armstrong Receiver Amplify 700,000 Times

By PAUL F. GODLEY
America's Foremost Radio Authority

(This is the third of a series of articles on the Armstrong super-regenerative receiver.)

In the regenerative receiver the greatest amplification is had when the amount of energy fed back into the grid circuit has reached a value sufficient to completely offset the energy lost in overcoming the resistance of the grid circuit.

This is an adjustment which can only be approached.

At the time when full realization of the regenerative method is expected, uncontrollable irregularities of operation of the vacuum tube render the adjustment extremely unstable. The plate circuit overfeeds the grid circuit and the latter begins to act as a generator. The tone qualities are thus destroyed.

Super-regeneration is a method whereby advantage may be taken of the extremes of amplification, of which the regenerative receiver is capable, without loss of tone.

This is accomplished by actually allowing the regenerative receiver to go into the oscillatory condition for a very short time—about 1-20th of a second—and then stopping the oscillatory action, allowing it to continue again, and so on.

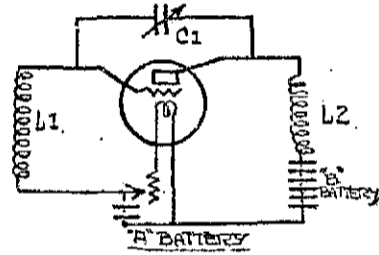

Tone qualities cannot be destroyed in so short a time.

During this short interval an impulse may have been fed around and around thru the tube circuits as many as half a dozen times.

Each trip sees it amplified approximately seven times, and the total amplification is close to 700,000 times.

The control of the regenerative circuit in this fashion is accomplished by throwing on the grid of the detector tube alternating negative and positive potentials at the rate of one negative pulse every 1-10,000 part of one second.

The device used to accomplish this is an oscillatory vacuum tube circuit whose inductances and capacities are so chosen as to give it an oscillatory frequency of 10,000 cycles—a wave length of more than

The part of the super-regenerative circuit which acts to generate alternating positive and negative potentials.

25,000 meters. Oscillations at this frequency begin to be audible, and make themselves known by a very high-pitched note in the telephone receivers.

These are fundamentals which the radio enthusiast must understand before he can successfully build and operate his own super-regenerative receiver.

THE GENERATOR
Study the diagram.

It shows that part of the circuit which acts to generate the alternating positive and negative potentials at the rate of 10,000 per second.

While this is in the positive half of its cycle the regenerative receiver circuit cannot oscillate.

When it is undergoing the negative half of the cycle, the regenerative receiver circuits oscillate thru about half a dozen cycles, thus accomplishing the great amplification.

L1, L2, and C1 all form a part of the grid circuit.

L2 alone is a part of the plate circuit. L2 being common to both, couples the circuits and makes them generate oscillations.

Do You Get Up in the Morning Feeling "Fit as a Fiddle?"

Success in Life Often Times Depends Upon Starting the Day Right

TO bounce out of bed feeling fresh as a daisy; to greet the little one prancing before you with a happy laugh, toss him up high with a firm, steady hand, and actually dance with the very joy of living!

Then plunge into your morning tub, if that's your method, dress with a smile on your lips and a song in your heart. Come with firm step to the breakfast table, eager for its wholesome fare—

And you spread joy in your household and go forth into the world "fit to fight," equipped with that most powerful of all weapons, great good health. For health is surely yours, and YOU do not need Tanlac.

But how different if you arise unrefreshed, aching in every fiber, unmoved by the healthy laughter of the household. The long day ahead will seem to you an eternity, promising nothing but misery, and you just have to summon all your will-power and what little energy remains to you, to drag yourself on, dress and take your place feebly, discouraged, without appetite, at your breakfast table. Gloom enshrouds you and casts its depressing pall about your whole family circle, and you go out to the battle of life already hopelessly beaten. YOU need Tanlac.

And, oh! how many thousands experience this wretched state! Far and wide the wail is heard from those who crawl out of bed with the greatest effort and wonder if there is nothing that can bring the health that will make them feel "fit as a fiddle" in the morning. They need Tanlac!

What is the matter? Why are they all tired out in the morning? The answer is simply that their systems are clogged and their blood poisoned from the waste substances that have been stored up because the digestive and eliminative organs have not performed their proper functions. And the reason for all this is that too much hastily eaten, food has been piled into the stomach.

When you feel yourself getting up in the morning unrefreshed and exhausted, look for the symptoms of stomach trouble, such as dizziness, nervousness, bad taste in the mouth and bitiousness. You may be constipated, too, and your liver sluggish or torpid. Unusual skin pallor, loss of weight, loss of appetite and inability to sleep restfully, are Nature's warnings, and you must look to your digestive system or be in danger of drifting into some serious disease.

The natural action of Tanlac on the digestive, secretory, assimilative and eliminative organs is the certain safeguard to your health, and the never failing foe of that awful tired feeling when you get out of bed in the morning. Tanlac has proved to be the best and safest tonic and system purifier, stimulating the digestive system to its proper functioning, so the blood is able to take up fresh building material and is so vitalized as to be able to more thoroughly eliminate the waste products which make you feel all tired out.

The cells of all parts of the body then receive real healthy nourishment, the shrunken tissues are filled out, the skin regains its glowing texture and the bloom of health. The eye clears, and with the strong and normal digestion the whole system is built up to the point where your hours of sleep are truly refreshing, and you get up in the morning feeling "fit as a fiddle."

It seems the sheerest folly for anyone to feel all tired out in the morning when Tanlac affords the best and most natural means of keeping in good trim or bringing the system back to its full and normal powers. Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

SCARAMOUCHE

By RAFAEL SABATINI

 "The La Tour d'Azyr stood there, a table very erect and dignified, ready to perish as he lived—fear and without deception. He came slowly forward, reached the table on the side and then at last the side of his set face relaxed, and he laughed." said M. de La Tour frowning, offended.
 "I have surprised me into it, you three minutes, monsieur, to leave this house, and to my own measures for your own good."
 "Listen!" Madame was flung away from Andre, as if moved by some premonition. "Ger-This is horrible!"
 "You are hard, but inevitable, man in despair, the fugitive cause. That man holds his escape. Besides, believe me there is a reckoning to be paid."
 "Hand came from beneath his and it came armed with a de Plougastel screams, and herself upon him. On her now, she clung to his arm, her strength and might. He tried to shake himself that desperate clutch.
 Andre-Louis had taken advantage of that moment of M. de La Tour's impotence to draw a pistol. "Stand away, e."
 "from obeying that imperious M. de Plougastel rose to feel to cover the Maquisier's head. But she still clung arm, clung to it with unselfish strength that continued to him from attempting to use it."
 "Is your father, Andre? Ger-This is your son—our son! The here on the table . . . God!" And she slipped next to the ground, and crouched obiding at the feet of M. de La Tour.
 CHAPTER XIII
 "The body of that convulsing woman, that mother of the mistress of the other, of those mortal enemies, dressed that admitted of no doubt."
 "The La Tour d'Azyr was the str into his bewildered mind the memory of something me de Plougastel had said that was on the table forward, unhindered. He unsteadily past this new son of his, and took up the that lay beside the candle. A long moment he stood it, none heeding him. The La Tour d'Azyr read the slowly thru. Then very quietly he stepped on Mme de Plougastel's side to raise her.
 "I was I never told? Why I tell me that this child had few days after birth." "I thought so—that nobody, nobody, you should know. There out of el, there was my family."
 "The windows open to the came from the distance the robbing of a drum to remind what was happening around. At last Andre-Louis began to his voice level and unuttering."
 "The La Tour d'Azyr," he said, "that you'll agree that this alters nothing since it is nothing of all that lies between us. And yet, but an it avail to talk? Here, take this safe-conduct made out for Mme de La Tour's footman, and with it our escape as best you can. I will beg of you the favor to allow me to see you."

HOLDING HANDS AND STARING EACH AT THE OTHER

or hear of you again."
 The Marquis rose slowly to his feet again. He came slowly forward, his smouldering eyes scanning his son's face.
 "You are hard," he said grimly. "But I recognize the hardness. It derives from the blood you bear."
 "Spare me that," said Andre-Louis.
 M. de La Tour considered him gravely, sadly, in silence for a moment.
 He turned to Mme. de Plougastel. "Goodbye, Therese." His voice broke. He had reached the end of his iron self-control.
 He held her face between his hands an instant, then very gently kissed her and put her from him. Standing erect, and outwardly calm again, he looked across at Andre-Louis who was proffering him a sheet of paper.
 "It is the safe-conduct. Take it, monsieur. It is my first and last gift to you, and certainly the last gift I should ever have thought of making you—the gift of life. In a sense it makes us quits. The irony, sir, is not mine, but Fate's. Take it, monsieur, and go in peace."
 M. de La Tour d'Azyr took it. His eyes looked angrily into the lean face confronting him, so sternly set. He thrust the paper in his bosom, and then abruptly, convulsively, held out his hand. His son's eyes asked a question.
 "Let there be peace between us, in God's name," said the Marquis thickly.
 Pity stirred at last in Andre-Louis. Some of the sternness left his face. He sighed. "Goodbye, monsieur," he said.
 He loosed his son's hand and stepped back. They bowed formally to each other. And then M. de La Tour d'Azyr bowed to Mlle de Keradiou in utter silence, a bow that contained something of utter renunciation, of finality.
 That done he turned and walked stiffly out of the room, and so out of all of their lives. Months later they were to hear of him in the service of the Emperor of Austria.
 CHAPTER XIV
 Andre-Louis took the air next morning on the terrace at Moudon. The hour was very early, and the newly risen sun was transmuting into diamonds the dewdrops that still lingered on the lawn.

 To Andre-Louis, sauntering there with hands clasped behind him and head hunched between his shoulders—for life had never been richer in material for reflection—the presently Alaine thru one of the glass doors from the library.
 "Have you decided what you are going to do?" she asked him.
 "Oh, something. Consider that in four years I have been lawyer, politician, swordsman, and buffoon—especially the latter. There is always a place in the world for Scaramouche."
 "Don't, Andre!" she begged him. "You are mediocre, you know."
 "Of course I am. Do you expect sincerity in man when hypocrisy is the very keynote of human nature? For two years I have persecuted by every means in my power . . . M. de La Tour d'Azyr."
 He paused before uttering the name, paused as if hesitating how to speak of him.
 "And in those two years I have deceived myself as to the motive that was spurring me. That even had he not killed Philippe de Villemorin, things would still have been the same."
 "But why, Andre?"
 He stood still and looked at her. "Because he sought you, Alaine."
 "I found him—a rat fighting a lion—fought him relentlessly until I saw that love had come to take in your heart the place of ambition. Then I desisted."
 "Until you saw that love had taken the place of ambition!" Tears had been gathering in her eyes whilst he was speaking. Now amazement eliminated her emotion. "But when did you see that? When?"
 "Sincerely, Alaine, that morning when you came to beg me not to keep my engagement with him in the Bois, you were moved by concern for him."
 "For him! It was concern for you," she cried, without thinking what she said.
 He saw light, dazzling, blinding, and it scared him. "And that was why you fainted?" he asked, incredulously.
 She looked at him without answering. As she began to realize how much she had been swept into saying by her eagerness to make him realize his error, a sudden fear came creeping into her eyes.
 He held out both hands to her. "Alaine! Alaine!" His voice broke on the name.
 M. de Keradiou, emerging a moment later from the library window, beheld them holding hands and staring each at the other beatifically, as if such raw Paradise in the other's face.

THE TATTOOED ARM

By ISABEL OSTRANDER

father, Miss Drake?" the latter asked after a moment.
 "Yes, I heard a sort of gasp behind me and turned to find Uncle Roger there, staring down at father with such a shocked, horrified expression that I thought he was going to have a stroke or something. We stood watching them bring father upstairs."
 "And where was your other uncle, Mr. Andrew Drake, during this time?"
 "And where was your other uncle, Mr. Andrew Drake, during this time?"
 "Patricia paused. "He is awfully jolly and the next morning he tried to make light of it, but when he learned how really ill father was he was terribly worried."
 "Your father was seriously ill, then?"
 "Yes. It was a week before he went to his office in Wall Street and he hasn't gone to the village once. I don't blame him!" Her small gloved hands clenched on the arms of her chair. "The things that were said and the horrid jokes that have been made! I was ashamed before—but it is even worse now!"
 "You mean that your uncles have exhibited similar signs of—eccentricity?" the detective asked.
 Patricia nodded.
 "Not exactly similar, but they have done things that it seems to me only people whose minds were deranged would do!—And Aunt Jerusha's attitude is the most inexplicable of all!"
 "My dear Pat!" John Wells exclaimed. "You cannot mean that she also!"
 "Oh, no, Aunt Jerusha hasn't gone crazy, too, but she insists that there is nothing wrong. When I suggested an alienist this morning she was angrier than I have ever seen her."
 "Nothing more happened for the first week after father's strange attack except that Uncle Roger seemed to grow more deeply troubled. He had promised to give a lecture on archaeology at the high school last Wednesday. If I had only known!"
 "Was the lecture not given?"
 "It was!" Bitterness sharpened her soft, girlish tones. "And the next day the village was talking worse than it had over father's behavior! Sergeant Miles, that lecture was the most hideous travesty imaginable! Had it been sheer drive it wouldn't have been so bad, but it was a clever satire, ridiculing the archaeological discoveries of recent years. The audience didn't know whether to laugh or to feel affronted at his insult to their intelligence."
 "The next day no one told me anything until Mr. Grayle came over. It was awful!"
 "Who is Mr. Grayle?" queried the detective.
 "A neighbor, a naturalist," Patricia responded. "He and Uncle Roger have been great friends ever since he bought The Rose Tree, next to the Kemp estate."
 She paused and a deeper flush suffused her face. Sergeant Miles glanced at the attorney, who smiled and nodded almost imperceptibly.
 "What was your uncle's explanation?"
 "He made none." She shrugged. "He looked dreadfully worn and ill but he was as dignified as ever and merely said that he regretted his discourse had not met with the approval of his hearers. On Saturday when the paper came out there was a perfect furore; the editor intimated that the lecture was the work of a disordered mind and recalled father's oration before the soldiers' monument, insinuating that they had both fallen victims to some strange aberration. In the very face of it Aunt Jerusha made me go to church with her yesterday and I never thought I could go thru such an agony of mortification!

 "I made up my mind I would come to see you today, and then when Uncle Andrew was found this morning—" She broke off once more as the too overcome to continue. The detective and the attorney glanced at each other before the latter remarked:
 "Go on, my child. Tell the Sergeant exactly what you told me."
 "Early this morning, Edward the houseman found Uncle Andrew sitting on the drawing room floor in his pajamas playing like a child with some ornaments which he had taken from the cabinet and mantel, and when he saw Edward he ran toward him on all fours growling as tho he were pretending to be some kind of an animal. Edward has never gotten over being shell-shocked. This morning was the last straw and he gave immediate notice, so Aunt Jerusha sent me into town to engage another houseman, and a gardener. That gave me my opportunity to come and consult Mr. Wells." She hesitated once more. "I don't know, tho, what she will say when she sees you, Sergeant."

 "She need see in me only what she sent for—the new houseman!" Sergeant Miles announced.
 Patricia's blue eyes opened very wide.
 "Oh, could you?" she breathed.
 "I want an assistant outside as well," interrupted the detective. "You say that a gardener is needed, too?"
 "You—you don't know any detective who is a gardener, too, do you?"
 "I know the very man!" Sergeant Miles exclaimed with enthusiasm.
 Patricia glanced from one serious face to the other.
 "Then you don't think it is just that they're losing their minds, my father and—and my uncles? You don't think my aunt will be the next to go and then—perhaps?"
 "She faltered once more but her meaning was unmistakable, and altho the attorney was discreetly silent he laid one slim, blue-veined hand upon her arm reassuringly.

"Oh, say, have you heard the news," he cried.
 "The people of Whispering Forest got tired of it and sent word to the Fairy Queen. So I s'pose this Doctor Snuffles must be a friend of hers."
 At this very moment the door of the little house opened and an old-looking little lady gentleman stepped out. He had knee breeches and buckled shoes and long coat tails that trailed on the ground. Also he wore wings embroidered with pictures of canary birds.
 He had a sign in his hand which he tacked beside the door. The sign said, "Wanted. A bill-maker and a bandage-roller at once."
 "Let's ask him if we'll do," whispered Nancy.

FICKLE POLITICAL FAVOR

POLITICAL favorites today may be forgotten tomorrow. Such is the fickleness of favor. This is strikingly illustrated in a campaign where men are pitted against one another in a mad scramble for votes which will enable them to annex an official title and—incidentally but rather necessarily—a salary.

Those who watch the rise and fall of the fortunes of political aspirants are struck by the uncanny manner in which even the slightest breath of suspicion, sometimes just a hint, will turn sentiment in another direction. No matter how strongly the tide may be running in behalf of a certain individual, a remark dropped at the proper time and in the right place will do its deadly work.

Altho the primary election is three weeks away, the reputation wrecker is already busy. Unable to encompass the defeat of a candidate in any other manner, the poison dropper is used. It is done surreptitiously, accompanied by wise nods and knowing whisks. Usually, the one who gets a "shot" of the poison doesn't take the trouble to investigate, but believes what he has heard, "just because So-and-So told me," he would probably admit, if pinned down.

While this comment is the result of a general observation, there are specific instances in Allen-co that are pertinent to the situation, regrettable tho they may be. There is no other American institution that can and does murder reputations quite so thoroughly and quickly as politics. The good that men do thruout their previous life is forgotten when they become candidates for office and somebody is able to bring out into light of day something against them, to be chewed over as a tempting morsel and turn others away from them.

In politics it is a wise procedure to believe nothing you hear and not always what you see, for even the eyes are sometimes deceived. Each and everyone should be as charitable and considerate of another as they would have others be charitable and considerate of them, were their positions reversed.

T. REED DUNLAP

ALL that remains mortal of T. Reed Dunlap was gazed upon today by his relatives and friends for the last time. The grave has closed over his form. The smile that illumined his face is no longer seen in his accustomed haunts.

With bowed heads and faltering steps, sorrow pinching their heart strings, friends who admired, respected and loved this man in life, followed his body to its last resting place, where the changing seasons will come and go and the splendid citizen whose new-made grave marks the landscape will live only in memory.

As the soft wind of a summer's day sighing thru the trees in the silent city of the dead sings a requiem, an echo is found in the hearts of those who remain to carry on. The sun's of summer and the snows of winter may change the scenes surrounding the place where his mortal body lies, but time will not entirely efface from memory his sterling character, his desirability as a citizen and friend.

PUBLICITY

BUSINESS was bad everywhere in 1921, but Fred P. Mann sold $500,000 worth of merchandise in Devil's Lake, N. D., a town of 5000 population.

"Advertising built my business for me," he says, "and my aim today is to outdo in newspaper advertising the mail order houses which flood my district with circulars."

There is always plenty of business for the man who goes after it. Depression usually is the result of timidity.

POSTING POLICEMEN

ANNOUNCEMENT that the city has taken steps to afford members of the police department an opportunity to inform themselves concerning the application of laws, is a move in the right direction.

Policemen, generally are little different from the average citizen, whose time and attention is taken up with pursuits that do not involve the necessity of study of laws. With officers well informed concerning their duty as such, they are more efficient and fewer mistakes are made, which sometimes cause the greatest embarrassment to innocent persons and paves the way for damage suits against the city.

A police officer does not need to know as much law as an attorney or a judge, but he should have knowledge of what does or does not constitute a misdemeanor or a serious crime, so that he may act quickly and intelligently when occasion demands. There are so many laws that the average citizen cannot keep himself posted on all of them.

OTHERS

IT is consoling to find someone else cursed with our faults. Human nature eternally seeks alibis. It's pleasing to see our good qualities mirrored in others. All of us admire ourselves in the looking-glass.

Study of human nature is popular because we use others as dim mirrors of ourselves. All based on vanity.

We think the weather is mighty warm. To make sure and flatter our judgment, everyone parrots: "Is it warm enough for you?"

WHEN WE GET OLD

CHARLOTTE SHARMAN, world's oldest stenographer, lives in London. Ninety years old, she is head of a chain of orphanages, and does her own typing.

It is refreshing to meet an aged person who doesn't need any old age pension. Barring bad luck, the average person with common sense should be self-supporting as long as he lives. For ones out of luck or improvident in youth and middle age, outside help is necessary.

What will you be doing when you are 90? Are you making any plans for it?

POEMS YOU WILL ENJOY

BY BERTON BRADLEY

PROPHECY

In clubs and grills the toppers wait
 Because they cannot still obtain
 Their whiskey, beer and wine and ale
 As when the land was wet as rain.
 "Ah, well," they say, "this thing will wane, Intime we'll have the hooch we lack."
 But tho they talk in such a strain,
 John Barleycorn ain't coming back.

Thou you "can get it," sure enough,
 If you will pay four prices for it,
 It's terrible man-killing stuff
 And folks with any sense abhor it;
 Adown their throats the old
 Soaks pour it,
 But not with any joyous snick.
 It is a fact, tho some deplore it,
 John Barleycorn ain't coming back.

For even bootleg hooch grows less
 And worse as weeks and months
 Go by;
 In spite of hopes the soaks express,
 The country's slowly getting Drier.
 The wets may grumble, moan
 And sigh
 With thirsty tongues that parch
 And crack,
 But here's the answer to their cry,
 "John Barleycorn ain't coming back!"

Common Sense Ways to Keep Well
 HOT WEATHER STROKES

By DR. R. H. BISHOP

If you are in such a run-down condition that you fall to perspire in hot weather, look out that you do not have a sunstroke.

The skin of a victim of sunstroke is hot and dry and the pulse is rapid but weak.

There will be temperature from 100 to 110 degrees with the pupils of the eyes contracted.

First aid in the cases of sunstroke consists of cooling the victim as quickly as possible. Get him into a shady spot and raise the head. Quickly remove the clothing and begin pouring cold water over him. It is best to start at the head and go down the body. The water should be

Making History.

INFANT MORTALITY in past ages has been something frightful, something almost beyond belief, and even today it occupies the time and the mind of leading physicians in all countries. The death rate among infants is being gradually reduced through new methods of hygiene, new preventatives and new remedies for infants. This reduction in the death rate has NOT been accomplished by adapting the precautions taken and remedies used by adults. Rather has it been to keep clear of the old methods, and choose after long research the precautions and remedies specifically applicable to infants.

This being so, is it necessary for us to caution mothers against trying to give her baby relief with a remedy that she would use for herself? Will she remember that Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for infants and children?

Children Cry For

Of Course You Love Your Baby.

You love it because of its very helplessness, because it can't tell you what is the matter when it feels bad. It can only cry and look to you for help. But the more you love baby, the more you want to help baby, the more you ought to realize what a wonderful remedy Fletcher's Castoria is. [It has been used for babies' ailments for over thirty years.]

An experienced doctor discovered Fletcher's Castoria especially for babies' use. It is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. Doctors who know what is safe and best for babies have only good to say of it.

Don't neglect your baby. Get a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria and give baby a few doses of it. See how the little one smiles at you as if trying to thank you for helping it. Soon you will learn to depend on Fletcher's Castoria, made just for Infants and Children, and of course you would not think of using anything for them that was not prepared especially for Infants and Children. So keep it in the house.

Hain't it wonderful how the average family all gits together again before mornin', or nearly allus? One thing that's depopulat' the farm is that we can't plow without missin' something.

To prepare business against the fifteenth of the month. And to study upon the surplus account against October first, which will be coming all too soon. Thence came a stranger introducing himself as a friend of a friend of mine, albeit told him politely but sternly, to wait ten minutes and the banks would be open.

Abroad with a brave smile to arrange against the payroll, albeit it grows harder and harder to convince bankers. They can't understand we are a seasonable industry. Nor take seriously our discourse that news is a dependable invoice.

Listened long to the whistle diapason of Bill Houtz, the switchman this day at High and Main. Working the split truck. And it seemeth his eyes are all for the gas waggon. When the pedestrians get well crowded into the center of the thoroughfare toot goes the whistle. And skoot go the poor walkers. A baby and her mother separated when they parked to make ready for Bill Feeley's Fierce-Sparrow. And three times they tried to join themselves and each tyme the noble Bill says toot-toot. Until Frank Koniminsk came along in his milk cart. And mother and babe just lunched right there in the center of Main-st. Feeling, mayhap, safer than trying to reach the sidewalks between toots. Marsh Thompson, just in from bed

Shawnee with his butter and eggs. Billy Jones, of prohibition oil fame, who became a capitalist and quit wild-catting for aye and all. He and the veteran Dave Toland have leased Safety Chairs 3 and 5 at the Manhattan. Business hours from 9 to 11. Ben Motter and Alan Brady, the bankers, braving home vesuviusing and starting for golf at 5. Byngtime. Louis Swartz parcel posteing the bride her going away organdie. A painfully refined lady eating pie with her spoon at Jake's Place. And her husband loving the coffee better in the saucer. But their children may summer at White Sulphur Springs. And she wearing a sweet jasmine perfume at that.

In the evening, dined on the remains of the weekly allowance. And it was a short order. Strolling towards the Occident heard the choir practising canticles for the morrow. So, remembered mother and her Sunday morning caution, "Jackie, did you wash behind your ears?"

Sat long counting the motor cars. In twenty minutes the score, stood: Fords 51; other cars, 43; one horse and buggy and two bicycles. Then read a zippy taylor in Harper's Bazaar making me think of Gib Dildine when he was leading cotillions in the old Lima House ball room. Ate of canned grapefruit in frozen jello. And so to bed.

Molly Torn Between Strength and Sweets

By ZOE BECKLEY

Seeing a love rival in BILLY BARTON, architect, BEN WHEELER, manufacturer, dis- misses him. Wheeler loves MOLLY WAYNE, whom he has saved from an elopement with DONALD MANNING actor, and later employed as chief of his office staff.

For a moment Molly stood too dazed to speak as the door banged behind Billy Barton.

A rush of thoughts confused her—unity and dismay for Billy; aston- ishment and anger that Ben Wheel- er had allowed his sense of rivalry to prejudice his business dealings.

She held her feelings in check, while she fumbled for a way of ac- cusing Ben without compromising Billy. As usual, Ben said it for her.

"Well, you needn't look so horri- fied, Molly. There are other archi- tects. Unless you don't think so."

"Ben, you've no right to say that. And you are not sticking to your agreement. It was to be nothing but business, you remember. Yet I know I have something to do with your sudden dissatisfaction with Billy Barton."

"You drove me to it by philander- ing with Barton. When I opened the door yesterday your two were holding hands and—"

"How dare you, Ben Wheeler!"

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Drake, 1424 Lakewood-av, are entertaining Mrs. Samuel Leland, Chicago.

Miss Leota Bowsher, 123 E. Cir- cular-st, will entertain the Lark- club, Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Angell, 1015 Rice-av, had as guests the latter part of the week Mrs. Hugh E. Neal and Miss Ella Neal, both of Sidney.

"DO YOU WANT STRENGTH OR SWEETS? YOU'VE GOT TO CHOOSE."

deny every atom of what you are saying. Shaking hands is not hold- ing hands. You can believe me when I say not a word passed ex- cept about our work."

"Oh, shucks, Molly, don't try to make me believe all those blushes and smiles were over planking spec- ifications and office space! You and Barton had been having a regular picnic. I saw it in your eyes."

"You the absurd and — and un- just." Molly turned away, biting her lips with vexation, but knowing in her heart Ben had made a thrust into truth.

"Besides," she went on, anger flaring up again, "suppose I did have any such thought, is destruc- tion the only way to compete?"

"Perhaps not, in business — the it's fully half the job. You create your product with one hand and kill off rivals with the other. In love, Molly—and I am in love with you—my plant and what I am are the creation side of my courtship."

"The rest is a matter of remov- ing obstacles. Admit it or not, Bill Barton is my rival. The least I can do is not to let him prosper thru my help."

Molly was silent an instant, think- ing of the hardness of the otherwise likable man before her.

"Billy will take care of himself," she said slowly, "as far as your agreement goes, but you have no right, Ben, to bring a personal af- fair into the Chamber of Commerce competition. Your being one of the judges doesn't give you the right to prejudice the others, or to vote against Billy's plans — if they are good."

"Molly, the trouble with you is" — Ben came over and stood close to her, his strong hand gripping the table edge, his voice well-controlled but hard with the intensity of his feeling—"that you can't see that ruthlessness is sometimes right."

"You can't build without destroy- ing something. I love you, and I want you I'm going to have you. If someone blocks the path, what should I do — meekly stand aside and surrender?"

"Would you feel flattered by that? Would you respect me? Don't you want a man who isn't afraid to use his strength? Or do you want a — a Donald Manning?"

"Do you want a man who can do things and build things? Or one who can draw pictures in the air or on paper? Do you want strength — or sweets? You've got to choose. You can't have everything. Come — answer!"

Attempts Suicide, Man Found Mentally Unbalanced

Jesse Montgomery, 52, whose ill-timed attempt to commit suicide July 8, resulted in his being taken to City Hospital, was committed to Toledo state hospital Monday.

Physicians who examined him in probate court, found Montgomery mentally unbalanced. Judge J. H. Hamilton ordered him committed to the asylum. An officer left for Toledo with his charge immediately.

On July 8 after stuffing the cracks of the windows and doors of his room in 133 W. Wayne-st with rags, Montgomery turned on the gas and drank carbolic acid.

His plight was discovered by Mrs. Harry Robb, landlady, who then went to an upper floor to make the beds. Physicians at City hospital were able to revive Montgomery.

Dependancy and depression are responsible for his condition, it is stated.

Another attempt to bring from Chicago J. C. Atkinson, former Sunday school superintendent at Christ Episcopal church, charged with embezzling funds of the Parmenter and Franklin printing companies, was made by Police Captain George Strick. He left for Chicago early Monday.

Be Rid of That Nagging Backache!

Are you dragging around day after day with a dull, never-ceasing backache? Do you suffer headaches, dizzy spells and sharp, stabbing pains; feel tired, irritable—without life or ambition? Likely then your trouble is due to kidney weakness—not hard to correct if treated promptly, but dangerous if neglected. For quick relief use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Lima case: J. H. Halter, steam-fitter, 456 W. Halter St., says: "My kidneys were out of order and my back became lame and ached so, it was hard to do any stooping. ## SHORT SHAVINGS

CHIT Wood, coal dealer, records the experience of a charming matron who had plumbers fixing the pipes in her home.

That wasn't all.

She was baking.

And what she was baking!

Cherry pie!

What poet will sing a song that adequately will express the sweet delights of a delectable cherry pie made at the height of the cherry time in June!

Browned just right.

Red inside.

And juicy.

Slits in the top.

Juice swelling thru the slits and thickening in ruby gobs, a dish to set out on a white cloth, to make the eater's mouth water and his eyes roll.

Well, that is what she was making—cherry pie. When the plumbers were gone she couldn't find the pie. At whom would suspicion point? Edison's class in questionaire answering would find that an easy one. The answer is "The plumber."

The talented cooks' little boy was not bothered by probabilities or deductive reasoning, rules of evidence or anything of the sort. His method was simpler and direct. He looked in the oven and there was the pie. The result of the morning's distractions, what with plumbers plumbing, was that the pie had been put in the oven and forgot.

L'Envol: This tale has a happy ending. The pie wasn't burned to a cinder. The stove hadn't been lighted. A little delay and it came out hot and steaming, red inside, with the crust browned just right and the thick juice going out on the top.

Frank Callahan was telling about a baseball game which his favorite team in the National League lost. His team got only two hits off the visiting team's pitcher. Each was made by the same man. Callahan said, "There was one thing wrong with his batting. He couldn't bunt his hits. So we got no runs at all."

J. F. Evans, attorney, heard someone ask for an aspirin tablet for a headache. This was in a party headed for Russell's Point.

Another member of the party eyed the treatment with interest. "Is that what an aspirin tablet is?" he said. "I always thought it was some fancy kind of writing tablet."

SAYS WONDERS OF RADIO ONLY BEGINNING

By NEA Service
NEW YORK. — Radio reception by merely plugging an electric light socket.

That's a new device which may revolutionize radio.

It is the invention of William Duhiller, an East Side electrical wizard who helped win the war by developing a wireless submarine detector.

"It is not a 'wired wireless,'" he explains, "but a simple arrangement which makes it possible to utilize indoor wires as aerials."

He got the idea when he started building a large outdoor aerial.

"It was hard work," he says, "I was about to give it up as a bad job when the idea struck me to use the wires in the house."

"I knew that any wire would receive the wireless waves. But I had to contend with the lightning current which went thru these wires."

"After some experimenting with condensers I rigged up a little 'filter' which allowed the high frequency radio waves to pass thru without interference."

"Further work perfected the device so that now one need only screw this little 'Duhiller' into an electric light socket, attach the receiving set and listen in!"

"This invention proved so popular that dealers bought 150,000 instruments in one day. And now Duhiller's factories are working overtime to keep up with the demand."

It is the crowning success of a career of hard pulling from a meager start to the president's chair of a $2,000,000 corporation with offices all over the world!

"When I quit school, at 11, to go to work," the inventor says, "I did not give up my interest in things electrical. I used to attend lectures at Cooper Union."

One night I heard a speaker on radio. I wanted to learn some more about it. So I carried his bag and walked home with him.

"He helped me get a job with a radio company."

LEARN'S BUSINESS
"I worked hard and learned the business. In 1910 I got a chance to go to the coast. There I did some broadcasting—sending messages from Seattle to Tacoma."

But I never dreamed radio would become as popular as it is today.

"After some experimenting I went to Europe. There I installed a wireless set in the palace of the czar."

"One thing led to another. My business grew, but I never let up on my laboratory work."

"When the war came I concentrated on developing a means of airplane wireless installation for artillery fire and detecting submarines."

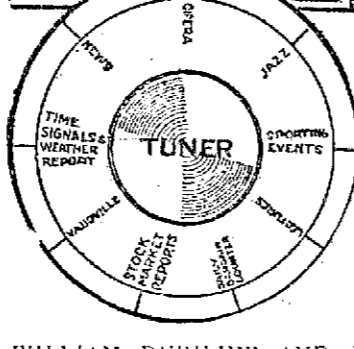

But he keeps right on experimenting.

regulation of the receiving set will become automatic. A turn of the tuning dial, and he will be listening to jazz. Another turn and he will hear opera.

It will be simple.

(This is the third of a series of articles on the Armstrong super-regenerative receiver.)

In the regenerative receiver the greatest amplification is had when the amount of energy fed back into the grid circuit has reached a value sufficient to completely offset the energy lost in overcoming the resistance of the grid circuit.

This is an adjustment which can only be approached.

At the time when full realization of the regenerative method is expected, uncontrollable irregularities of operation of the vacuum tube render the adjustment extremely unstable. The plate circuit overloads the grid circuit and the latter begins to act as a generator. The tone qualities are thus destroyed.

Super-regeneration is a method whereby advantage may be taken of the extremes of amplification, of which the regenerative receiver is capable, without loss of tone.

This is accomplished by actually allowing the regenerative receiver to go into the oscillatory condition for a very short time—about 1-20,000 part of one second—and then stopping the oscillatory action, allowing it to continue again, and so on.

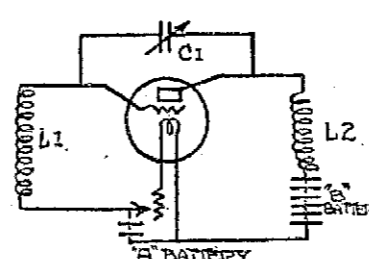

Tone qualities cannot be destroyed in so short a time.

During this short interval an impulse may have been fed around and around thru the tube circuits as many as half a dozen times.

HIGH AMPLIFICATION
Each trip sees it amplified approximately seven times, and the total amplification is close to 700,000 times!

The control of the regenerative circuit in this fashion is accomplished by throwing on the grid of the detector tube alternating negative and positive potentials at the rate of one negative pulse every 1-10,000 part of one second.

The device used to accomplish this is an oscillatory vacuum tube circuit whose inductances and capacities are so chosen as to give it an oscillatory frequency of 10,000 cycles—a wave length of more than

The part of the super-regenerative circuit which acts to generate alternating positive and negative potentials.

25,000 meters. Oscillations at this frequency begin to be audible, and make themselves known by a very high-pitched note in the telephone receivers.

These are fundamentals which the radio enthusiast must understand before he can successfully build and operate his own super-regenerative receiver.

THE GENERATOR
Study the diagram.

It shows that part of the circuit which acts to generate the alternating positive and negative potentials at the rate of 10,000 per second.

While this is in the positive half of its cycle the regenerative receiver circuit cannot oscillate.

When it is undergoing the negative half of the cycle, the regenerative receiver circuits oscillate thru about half a dozen cycles, thus accomplishing the great amplification.

L1, L2, and C1 all form a part of the grid circuit.

L2 alone is a part of the plate circuit. L2 being common to both, couples the circuits and makes them generate oscillations.

Do You Get Up in the Morning Feeling Fit as a Fiddle?

Success in Life Often Times Depends Upon Starting the Day Right

TO bounce out of bed feeling fresh as a daisy; to greet the little one prancing before you with a happy laugh, toss him up high with a firm, steady hand, and actually dance with the very joy of living!

Then plunge into your morning tub, if that's your method, dress with a smile on your lips and a song in your heart. Come with firm step to the breakfast table, eager for its wholesome fare—

And you spread joy in your household and go forth into the world "fit to fight," equipped with that most powerful of all weapons, great good health. For health is surely yours, and YOU do not need Tanlac.

But how different if you arise unrefreshed, aching in every fiber, unmoved by the healthy laughter of the household. The long day ahead will seem to you an eternity, promising nothing but misery, and you just have to summon all your will-power and what little energy remains to you, to drag yourself up, dress and take your place listlessly, discouraged, without appetite, at your breakfast table. Gloom enshrouds you and casts its depressing pall about your whole family circle, and you go out to the battle of life already hopelessly beaten. YOU need Tanlac.

And, oh! how many thousands experience this wretched state! Far and wide the wail is heard from those who crawl out of bed with the greatest effort and wonder if there is anything that can bring the health that will make them feel "fit as a fiddle" in the morning. They need Tanlac!

What is the matter? Why are they all tired out in the morning? The answer is simply that their systems are clogged and their blood poisoned from the waste substances that have been stored up because the digestive and eliminative organs have not performed their proper functions. And the reason for all this is that too much hastily eaten, food has been piled into the stomach.

When you feel yourself getting up in the morning unrefreshed and exhausted, look for the symptoms of stomach trouble, such as dizziness, nervousness, bad taste in the mouth and biliousness. You may be constipated, too, and your liver sluggish or torpid. Unusual skin pallor, loss of weight, loss of appetite and inability to sleep restfully, are Nature's warnings, and you must look to your digestive system or be in danger of drifting into some serious disease.

The natural action of Tanlac on the digestive organs is the certain safeguard to your health, and is never failing food of that awful feeling when you get out of bed in the morning. Tanlac has proved to be the best and safest tonic and stimulant, purifier, stimulating the digestive system to its proper functioning, so the blood is able to take up fresh building material and is so vitalized as to be able to more thoroughly eliminate the waste products which make you feel all tired out.

The cells of all parts of the body then receive real healthy nourishment, the shrunken tissues are filled out, the skin regains its glowing tone, the bloom of health. The state of the system is such that normal digestion the whole system is built up to the point where your hours of sleep are truly refreshing, and you get up in the morning feeling "fit as a fiddle."

It seems the sheerest folly for anyone to feel all tired out in the morning when Tanlac affords the best and most natural means of keeping in good trim or bringing the system back to its full and normal power.

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.
